

Jim

I became a Christian on May 4, 1971, through the ministry of The Navigators while I was in the U.S. Navy. I continued with that ministry after discharge by moving into the home of the man who had led me to the Lord but who now led the collegiate ministry at The University of Connecticut. Two years later, desiring to learn greater effectiveness in teaching, I left for seminary.

Winnie

I was raised in a small, western Pennsylvania town by loving, Christian parents who were always very active in the local church. My earliest memories include attending church regularly. When I was eleven, I started attending church camp each summer. Each evening we closed the day around a campfire with singing and a short message to challenge us about some aspect of life and our relationship with Jesus. One evening, I heard and understood the message that Jesus died for me, personally! This was different than just knowing the facts about Jesus' death. My response was to accept what Jesus did for me, ask Him to forgive my sins, and to try to live my life pleasing to Him.

Their Ministry

Winnie continues to work at Columbia International University. Jim serves as Director of Operations at Crossover. He will:

Oversee the day-to-day operations of Crossover—USA providing direction to the home staff, overseeing the finances and publications (web and print).

Participate as a member of the strategy and development team proposing the goals and identifying the required resources needed to reach those goals.

Participate as a member of the international leadership team in conjunction with Crossover-Brazil and local national leaders, developing the educational process, procedures, and partnerships that are most effective in seeing churches planted throughout Eurasia.
